CANADA SIGNS FREE-TRADE DEAL

In a surprise move today, Prime Minister Mulroney announced that he and Ronald Reagan have already signed a free trade deal, and that it has been in ettect tor several years already, although several major parts are unsettled.

President Reagan, when asked about the deal said that he was pleased with it, but couldn't remember signing it. "It you say I did, I'll take your word tor it." Vice President Bush complained that he had heard nothing about the deal, and also about underarm perspiration. "Why doesn't somebody tell me about these things? The press always knows what's going on betore I dol By the way, you guys stink."

Details ot the pact are still uncertain, but rumoured to be part ot it are the Toronto Blue Jays, the Montreal Expos and the General Motors Corporation. The U.S. government would take control ot the two baseball teams, repatriating them to their "home and native land", and buying General Motors, then selling it to the Canadian government tor one U.S. dollar (100 billion Canadian). In return, Canada would build cars tor the Americans for free, and supply beer for all baseball games, so that no one has to drink piss water anymore.

Stock markets in both countries reacted tavourably to the deal, many ot them taking the day oft to get pissed drunk. All markets closed at new record highs.

The Toike's staft reviewed the agreement and decided that it the stock markets can take the day oft, so can we.

Reactions trom other countries were mixed. British Prime Minister Thatcher was quoted there as saying "How can the Toike Oike statt do such a thing? Where will we get our humour trom?" Libyan leader Khaddatti was quoted as saying absolutely nothing, a reaction matched by former Indian P.M. Indira Gandhi, and tormer Egyptian leader Anwar Sadat. The most negative reaction to the deal came trom the Kremlin, where Soviet leader Gorbachev said, "Where's Canada?"

But by tar the biggest reaction came when my sister told my parents that she was getting married.

VATICAN BANS NOSE PICKING

Vatican City, Special to the Toike.

The pope has announced today that the Vatican central committee tor Religion and Other Attairs that are None ot Our Business is tinished preparing a document which outlines the otticial Vatican (and perhaps even Papal) position on various issues. Nose picking, with or without the help of mechanical devices, is a sin because "...it man was meant to pick his nose, he would have been given tingers with vacuum power, lots ot little hairs tor scrubbing action, and thousands ot tiny nozzles that spray cleaning tluid at high velocities...", says the report.

The use of blue highlighters has been banned because "they don't really highlight, do they? They just make everything darker so you can't read..." These highlighters are only banned it there is intent to use them tor highlighting words. It is permissible, however, to use them to underline words or to colour pictures. Speaking Quebecois French was torbidden because "it sounds tunny."

Other sins and torbidden items are: mid-sized station wagons, the Nikon F3 SLR camera, bottles and jars that open clockwise, washing your feet on Thursdays, microwave popcorn, allowing insects to help in fertilizing plant life, striped toothpaste, putting mustard on french fries, and editing commercials out ot videotaped TV programs.

The First Toike Staff

The Toike Oike is the humour publication of the University of Toronto Engineering Society. In the past the Toike has been called sexist and racist, Toike's have been burned, and at the Engineering Society we are not unfamiliar with the term 'lawsuit'. Since the Engineering Society election, we have been approached by several people, including our Dean, Alumni, and fellow Engineering students asking why the Toike offends so many people. At an officers meeting, the problem was discussed and it was agreed that a Toike advisory board would be set up. The board consists of 8 members of the Engineering Society, which are the President, both Vice-Presidents, the Secretary, the Treasurer, the Communications Chairman, the Toike Publisher, and the Toike Editur(s). Four members of this board must read and approve the Toike before it is published..

The Toike Oike is intended as a completely light-hearted publication and it is the wish of all those involved in publishing it that it is taken in this way. If you have any suggestions or comments which will help us, including criticism of this specific Toike, or if you wish to help us produce the Toike, please contact:

Husband Beats Mother in Law

Dear Godiva

My husband is a kind, gentle man who has never hit me in our 15 years of marriage but recently my mother moved in with us and he hits and kicks her almost every day. I've tried talking to him about it but he just ignores me. If this keeps up it will ruin our marriage. What can I do?

U-WHO?

All summer long I've been listening to fans of U2 use terminology such as "emotional", "radical", and "deep" to describe the musical musings of their idols. I find their somewhat overwrought enthusiasm painfully lacking in reality. What's actually happened is that the band's four Irish stooges have perfected and presently typify "trendy radicalism". This dish, when properly served to an unsuspecting public, results in mega record sales and near-sainthood for the perpetrators. What the hell; anything for a buck! What U2 epitomizes is outright and downright commercialism. Their most recent effort, The Joshua Tree, is a Madonna-ish collection of reasonably musical tunes, many of which sound remarkably similar. The lyrics, composed by the group and sung by Bono (not his real name) (somewhat like Prince and Meatloaf) contain enough fabricated social conscience as to make one gag. "Bullet the Blue Sky". "Running to Stand Still". "In God's Country." That's radical? That's deep? That's garbage! Stylized, commercialized garbage! "Oh, but how emotional and deep-feeling Bozo must be to sing with such expression in his voice", his (female) fans are heard to coo. Let's get real here folks. The man sings as if he's giving birth to a rhinoceros. Yet the charade lingers on and continues to grow. Their exploitation of a continent hungering for rock musicians who demonstrate social responsibility could be the hoax of the decade. By comparison, heavy metal music, to its credit, never pretended to be anything other than high-decibel refuse only suitable for entertaining mutants and farm animals. Why is it then that U2 is taken so seriously? They've obviously fallen into the same commercial trap as so many "radical" bands before them but can not accept this painful reality. When will people finally catch on and admit they've been had? Let's face it, when the mighty and commercial Time magazine puts you on their cover, the time is ripe to admit assimilation into the American musical mainstream and placidly accept your place in rock history alongside Phil Collins, Whitney Houston and Michael Jackson. Millions of fans all over the world may consider U2 their spokesmen of social concern but as far as I'm concerned, I still haven't found what I'm looking for.

CBC PREVIEWS NEW HIT SERIES

Roots, Ottawa

The new CBC fall schedule will include a new action-adventure series modelled after the American made `The A Team'. The Canadian version with an all Canadian cast will be entitled `The Team Eh!'.

The premise of the series is, two Canadian Armed Forces personnel escape from a Canadian submarine patrolling Arctic waters after being falsely accused of hunting polar bears with torpedos while on routine patrol. The two soldiers are brilliantly portrayed by Harvey Kirk (as Colonel Scott) and Andre the French Giant (as B.A. , thats Big Andre).

The two friends meet up with an orphaned Inuit girl (played by Anne Murray) and her faithful dog Artook (acted by Muffin the Pit Bull Terror) The young girl is singing her way across the country while trying to find her long lost brother. The two soldiers join up with the girl and travel across both territories and even into Northern Ontario helping Indians, Inuits, prospectors and mules while staying one step ahead of the RCMP.

Watch for it this fall every Tuesday night at 8:00 on CBC.

HER MAJESTIES SHIFT

London - (a Toike special)

A source in Buckingham Palace revealed to a Toike reporter that an elaborate game is being played there amongst the Royal Family members, particularly Charles and Andrew and their wives.

There has been much speculation over the past few months over the soundness of Charles and Diana's marriage, but it now appears that there should be concern over Randy Andy and Fergie's.

It all started, our source claims, when Charles discovered that he had more in common with Fergie than Diana, who as we have all been told in the sensationalist tabloids, is avoiding her husband and going to events by herself, or with another man. Charles and Sarah have been going out to different events wearing disguises, him with false ears and a wig, and her with a wig and glasses.

Andy and Diana, have not been seen together in public at all, prefering to remain inside Buckingham Palace or Windsor Castle, depending on whether his parents are at home or at the cottage. In short, it appears as if the Royal Family is not immune to wife swapping. When we asked our source about how the Queen felt about all this chicanery, he/she replied, "She doesn't give a damn as long as there are no divorces. Divorces don't do much for a good public image." Remember that you heard it first in the Toike.

PIT BULL

There was another attack involving a pit bull terrier and a policeman yesterday. Witnesses claimed that the attack was completely unprovoked, and the most vicious violence that they could recall seeing. Charged in the case is Constable John Doe, under the cruelty to animals act. The pit bull terrier is in stable condition in a veterinary hospital.

Wayne McPhee, President of the Engineering Society is pleased to announce the hiring of Greg A. Gerrie, B.A., B.Ed., for the position of Engineering Employment Liaison. Mr. Gerrie brings to the position a vast array of past personal employment and educational experience ranging from engineering and army officer education to working in various capacities for Queen's University.

We are confident that Mr. Gerrie will be a tremendous asset to the students of engineering and that with his help, these same students will continue to garner the employment opportunities they so richly deserve.

As many upperclass members have noted, the Flrosh seem to be getting shorter every year. While this does make it very easy for us to trip over them, upsetting our books, it has not been the subject of many complaints. However, one thing that has is the height of the drinking fountains in the Sandford Fleming Building. In the last two years alone, the Toike Oike has been flooded with hundreds of letters from unhappy Flrosh who have been unable to reach the fountains. Finally, we decided that enough was enough and that the time had come to take action in this matter. Employing members of the Better Fountain Committee (B.F.C.) we lobbied to have the fountains lowered to a manageable height for the Flrosh. In late July, we were successful in our quest.

The fountains have all been lowered in the Sandford Fleming Building to a height of 45 cm above the floor.

Naturally, this is too low for those of us in higher years, so the fountains in all the other Engineering buildings have only been halved in height. We request that all Flrosh avoid these other water fountains as your attempts to reach the water will only delay the rest of us. Use only those fountains in the Sandford Fleming Building. Remember, there are more of us than there are of you.

Early yesterday, Stadium Corporation president Chuck Magwood held a startling news conference at which he announced that there would be a weight restriction imposed on future patrons of the as yet unbuilt Skydome. The details are still sketchy but the reports indicate that the stadium architects did not take into account the weight of the spectators when designing the stadium. Mr. Magwood announced that anyone over the weight of 175 pounds would be required to pay for two tickets and would have to pay a deposit to obtain a specially designed plexiglass insert that would distribute the mass evenly over two seats. As a result of this, all of the armrests in the Skydome will have to be made removable, at an additional cost of $10 million to the Stadium Corporation. A visibly shaken Don Smith, president of the Ontario Liberal Party and of Ellis-Don, the company Skydome, emerged from an emergency meeting with his design team and had the following public statement: "We are presently looking into the cause of this unfortunate oversight. We are understandably embarassed at this turn of events but we are confident that further investigation will reveal that the person to blame for this is either a communist infiltrator, a member of the Ontario Conservative Party, or an honours graduate Waterloo engineer." Premier David Peterson, speaking during a campaign stop in Kaszuby, Ontario, said "We stand behind the experienced management of Ellis-Don. Furthermore, Bill Davis may someday be a criminal and Bob Nixon looks like a retard. Also fat people deserve to be charged higher admission since they're always on diets anyways and don't contribute anything to the concession stands." Ontario Conservative Leader Larry Grossman, trying hard to conceal his glee, remarked "It's about time people saw the government of David Peterson for what it really is, a self-serving Yuppie haven dedicated to making life miserable for visible minorities such as fat people. I can't tell you how sorry I am to have this come up so close to an election." Grossman was campaigning at the Rosedale Super Fitness at the time. NDP leader Bob Rae was unusually optimistic. Speaking at a plastic workers luncheon in Windsor he remarked, "Making those 50,000 inserts will help create employment and what's good for the people of Windsor is good for Ontario." He then proceeded not to touch any of his food, citing stomach cramps. For the record, Mr. Rae weighs 175 lbs. Mr. I. M. Fatt, president of the "Fat People Make Better Doors Society" was understandably incensed. "I hope David Peterson chokes on his red tie. This is discrimination, pure and simple." Mr. Fatt was then convinced to withold public criticism of the plan until after the election by a Liberal party worker who offered him a Big Mac. Earlier today, Weight Watchers released a statement of general approval.

Real Capitol Punishment

A six year old boy and his father were walking in the park one day when they came upon two dogs copulating. The little boy asked his father what they were doing. His Father told him that they were making a puppy. The boy was satisfied with this answer and so the two continued on their way.

About a weak later the young boy walked into his parents room and caught them making love. He asked his father "What are you and mom doing." His father replied " aaah your mother and I are making a baby." To this the little boy replied " Well dad can you turn mom over I'd rather have a puppy".

Most deals played in the annual Australian Outback Bridge Championships achieve limited publicity but this particular case is different, since it is the same bridge article we print every fucking week!

South led with the 3 of diamonds, thus throwing his opponents of guard, but East was able to seize the trick since North was out taking a leak.

Play continued in this manner until East made a dangerous mistake, he played a card that South already had in his hand. South astutely grasped the possibilities and answered by punching East in the face. West countered South's finesse with a particularly large club which he had hidden under the table, and North went for another leak.

HYDROPHOBIA?

Moscow - (special to the Toike)

A team of medical researchers, led by the prize winning doctor Victor Ekioekiotov, has made a shattering discovery in the Soviet Union recently. Data leaked to the Toike today seem to point to just one possible conclusion, according to our science and medicine reporter: "Water causes death in laboratory animals." The Soviet team apparently worked with both rats and mice, with a 100% mortality rate. The animals were immersed in water for a period of one month and surprisingly, not one survived. A control group of animals were kept from water for a similar period, with an identical mortality rate. The team has no explanation for its results, stating that this may just be "one of those things we aren't meant to know."

Man Lays Five On Medical Community

Medical journals have recently reported a man who has five penii. Mr. Jay Sank of New Jersey has hidden his extra sexual parts for 24 years, but has recently come forward seeking aid in finding a contraceptive device. Mr. Sank has avoided gym classes and was very self-conscious about his oddity. When he was 22, he had his first sexual experience. The girl was not horrified as one would imagine, but rather amazed as he spent the night giving her his (soon to be classic) 21 gun salute! Mr Sank turned to doctors for help with locating a possible contraceptive but they were unsuccessful, and the job was turned over to a bio-medical engineer. He came up with the idea of using a medical glove as a super-sheik. Mr. Sank was very happy with this idea and because of the experience is now more open about his extra features. In fact, he has place adds in a number of personal columns around the world, in a search for a woman with five vaginii in his quest for the 'ultimate mutual deca orgasm!'

Mr. Sank has become a celebrity because he is the first proven case of multiple male orgasms and also known to have $435^5$ possible sexual positions!

Mr. Sank, due to his appearances on Dr. Ruth"s show, and others, has met and is presently dating the Dionne Quintuplets.

Through the modern advances of genetic engineering, Mila Mulroney has found a solution to the problem of Brian's successor in the next federal election.

GUMBY PARTY AHEAD IN POLES

Pokey, the Gumby Party spokesman, announced today that the there are more polish people in the Gumby Party than in any of the other parties in the Ontario elections.

Pokey attributes the Gumbies new popularity to their position on free trade. Says party leader Gumby " We'd like to free trade but we don't know where he is being held. Last we heard he was being held incommunicado but we could not find communicado on any map."

Gumby once again based his campaign on the popular slogan " Lefter than Left, Righter than Right , the ultimate in flexibility. "

An man was unhappy with the way his penis was working, so he went to the doctor's to see about a transplant. He looked through the doctor's catalogue, and found out that they were more expensive than he could afford, except for one. He paid the doctor's fee and got a penis transplant. Immediately, he went home to try it out. He was not too pleased. A week later, he was at the fitness club with a friend of his discussing his woes. "I just got a penis transplant, but it's not that good." "I had mine done a few weeks back," replied his friend, "and I can't complain, the girls are flocking to me like crazy." "They're avoiding me like the plague." His friend took a closer look. " No wonder! That's my trade in!"

"Just bring me the damn girl and don't worry about me!" replied the old man.

After arguing with the madam for some time, the old man finally received what he wanted. He was escorted to a room where a beautiful woman waited for him. After removing all his clothing, the man placed a piece of cotton in each ear, and each nostril, and a condom on his tool.

The young woman was really puzzled. She said, "I can understand why you would use a condom, but I cannot understand why you put cotton in your ears and your nostrils?"

The old man smiled and replied, "There's two things in life I just cannot stand... the smell of burning rubber and the sound of a crying woman!"

"Yes, you do, but only if I get one in return." The Artsie thought about it, and agreed. "For my first wish, I want my pockets to be filled with gold." "Done" replied the leprechaun. "I want to have beautiful women around me always." "Done" "For my third wish, I want to be a famous Artsie." "Done. But now you have to give me my wish." The Artsie agreed. The leprechaun pulled his pants down exposing himself, and told the Artsie to bend over. As he was going away at it, the leprechaun asked the Artsie how old he was. "35" The little man laughed. "And you still believe in leprechauns?"

Jesus Christ and Moses were out golfing one day on the course at Glen Abbey, just a couple of days after the PGA tour had played there. They were up to a short hole with a pond just before the green. Jesus pulled out his 7 iron and prepared to tee off. Moses looked astonished. You won't reach the green with a 7! You'll drop it in the pond!" Jesus replied calmly, "I saw Jack Nicklaus make this shot with a 7 iron, and I'm going to too." So Jesus teed off, and promptly dropped it in the pond. "Moses, could you part the waters for me so I can get my ball?" So Moses did, and Jesus retrieved his ball. "Now, Jesus, you only get one, so don't shoot it back in there." Moses cautioned. Jesus set up again with the 7 iron. "Listen, I told you before: Use a 5 iron, not a 7 or you'll put it in the water!" "If Jack Nicklaus can use a 7 iron, then I'm going to." Jesus gave a mighty hit and the ball went plunk in the water again. "Could you part the waters please Moses?" "I told you that I'd only do it once." So Jesus went out to get his ball himself,. by walking on the water. Along came two other golfers, and they were shocked. "Who does he think he is, Jesus Christ?" Moses replied, "He is Jesus Christ, but the problem is that he thinks he's Jack Nicklaus!"
